THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

While the planned dissolution of the waterway directorates and their conversion into waterway inspectorates was postponed until further notice to avoid further unrest among the population in East Germany, the Berlin and Fuerstenberg districts were changed on 1 July 1953, giving the Berlin waterways office control over all areas located in the Berlin town area with the sole exception of the south west shore of Zeuthener See (lake) and the villages of Zeuthen and Eichwalde which belong to the Zone. The Ihedersdorf waters, the navigable section of the Loeknitz River and the Lehms waterway between river kilometers 4.5 and 24 were placed under the administration of the Fuerstenberg waterways office.
